HE MIHI KI A MR ARMSTRONG

Tena koe te rangatira na te mea i arahia e koe nga ahuatanga o tenei kura, mai i te timatatanga o tenei kura tae atu ki te mutunga o tenei tau.

Tena koe mo nga wa i tautokotia e koe nga mahita Maori nga tamariiki Maori me nga tikanga Maori a, kia ngawari ai to tatou haere.

No reira tena koe te rangatira, kua tae koe ki te tihi o te maunga.

PRINCIPAL'S FOREWORD

It is with real sadness that I write my final foreword to this the eighteenth College magazine and prepare myself for a distinctively different life style in the future. My time at Mangere College has been exciting and exacting but eminently satisfying. There has been a common element throughout the years which has characterised the College and which I know will remain predominant and that is the warmth, the concern and the friendliness of the Mangere College community, the staff - teaching, administrative and maintenance, our students, our parents and the governing body. It has always been a place of a cheerful smile, a courteous greeting and an offer of support and assistance. It has always had the welfare of its students at heart and while the road has not been easy it has had many successes, not in terms of national recognition but in terms of young people who have taken on the requirement for industry, reliability and responsibility in the working world. I have no doubt that the great majority of former students are currently expressing these values which the College has consistently pursued.

I have no doubt also, that it will continue to foster those whose voice is now only faintly heard, the less advantaged, and those who have had to live consistently with the media's denigration. One thing that I learnt many years ago and which my time as Principal of Mangere College has only reinforced is that while we supposedly live in a democracy, there is nothing democratic about the power of the media.

I am certain that the College will continue to grow in strength and stature. It has firm foundations, a well developed physical environment, highly developed facilities, a secure financial base and an excellent staff and governing body. I extend to all those who have been and those who will become part of the Mangere College community in the future, my warmest good wishes.
